Nari Sahasi Initiative by Jogi Foundation

Through the Nari Sahasi initiative, Jogi Foundation has provided entrepreneurship training to nearly 5,000 women, enabling them to take their first steps toward starting their own businesses. The primary objective of this program was to motivate women to become future entrepreneurs and to equip them with essential knowledge related to self-employment and sustainable livelihoods.

As part of this initiative, around 100 women received financial assistance of ₹5,000 each to support the launch of their own businesses. The program was conducted across villages in the Jewar–Tappal region, focusing on empowering women at the grassroots level.

During the training sessions, participants were educated on how to start an online business, including practical guidance on selling home-made products through digital and online platforms. The initiative aimed to enhance digital awareness, promote financial independence, and strengthen women’s participation in local and online markets.

“जब नारी आत्मनिर्भर बनती है,
तब पूरा समाज सशक्त बनता है।”

Nari Sahasi Initiative: Promoting Women's Health, Hygiene, and Awareness

Under the Nari Sahasi Initiative, Jogi Foundation implemented a comprehensive awareness and outreach campaign focused on women's health, menstrual hygiene, and mental well-being. The core objective of this initiative was to reach women from marginalized communities where menstruation is still surrounded by silence, stigma, and misinformation.

The campaign was also extended to villages in and around the Jewar region, where women and adolescent girls were provided with sanitary pads and vital information related to menstrual health. Special attention was given to rural communities, where lack of access to resources and awareness often leads to health complications and social restrictions for women and girls.

Through awareness sessions and direct engagement, the initiative helped foster a new sense of understanding, confidence, and acceptance regarding menstrual health.

In total, the Nari Sahasi Initiative facilitated the distribution of approximately 100,000 sanitary pads, directly benefiting more than 100,000 women and adolescent girls. This large-scale outreach played a crucial role in breaking long-standing taboos and encouraging open conversations around menstruation. Many participants expressed relief and gratitude for receiving accurate information and practical support, which enabled them to manage their menstrual health with dignity.

This initiative was not limited to improving hygiene practices alone; it also aimed to break the silence surrounding women's health issues and empower women to take control of their own well-being. The positive response and active participation from women exceeded expectations and became a source of immense pride for Jogi Foundation. The strong community support reinforced the importance of such initiatives and highlighted the urgent need for continued efforts in this area.

The Nari Sahasi Initiative stands as a meaningful step toward creating healthier, more informed, and empowered communities. Jogi Foundation remains committed to advancing women's health, dignity, and empowerment and will continue to work tirelessly to bring awareness, resources, and positive change to the lives of women across both urban and rural regions.
